Supporting the BKFA and its Code of conduct

The main aims of the BKFA are:

To be an elected representative body to unify all aspects of British kiteflying for the whole of the United Kingdom, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands.

To achieve national recognition as a body representing all codes of kiteflying and to work with regulatory bodies and organisations to ensure that the interests of all kite flyers are represented.

To work with all other clubs, societies and associations throughout the UK to further the sport and pastime of kiteflying.

To promote safe flying and to provide model codes for health and safety for clubs and kitefliers to adopt.

To promote and raise awareness of all kite events throughout the United Kingdom.

Should your organisation be accepted into membership of the British Kite Flying Association, by completion of this form your organisation is agreeing not to bring the British Kite Flying Association or any of its members into disrepute in any way, shape or form. You are committing to support the aims of the British Kite Flying Association and so far as you are able to require your members to abide by the code of conduct published on the BKFA website from time to time.

The British Kite Flying Association reserves the right to refuse any membership application which will be decided by the Association's committee.

Please indicate that you have read, understood and agree to the above statement and that all information provided is accurate:
